The University Library has long been regarded as a treasure house of material relating to South Carolina, but much of this reference matter has been inaccessible to the student who would specialize in the life of our State. There was no attempt made by the older librarians to assemble in one place everything relating to South Carolina, so the books and pamphlets on this, to us, very important subject, were mixed with those in the general library. Miss Margaret H. Rion, a former librarian, realized the value of a collection of "Caroliniana" and began to put aside in a special location all that she came across. The present library staff has continued this separation, until it is hoped that practically all of the library's "Caroliniana" is in the Carolina alcove. It can never be said definitely that this material has all been removed from the other classes of books, for whenever any are rearranged, a bit of "Caroliniana" is very apt to come to light.

The effort to continue this search and segregation to completion, to fill in bad gaps, and to bring the collection more nearly up-to-date, has required much time and labor and accounts largely for the seemingly long delay in publication. Another cause of procrastination was the desire to include the considerable amount of material in the Abney Library, presented to the University last spring. This is appended in a separate list.

For a saving of time, space and expense, only an author catalogue has been attempted. It is regretted also that, for the same reasons, descriptive notes on the more important and doubtful items have not been made, as in the case of some similar checklists.

The preparation of a work of this character is far from easy because, for one thing, of the elusive and shadowy boundaries of the subject. It is practically impossible to formulate an entirely satisfactory definition of what is "Caroliniana." Each collector makes his own definition. Prof. Yates Snowden, Mr. August Kohn, Mr. A. S. Salley, Jr., Dr. George A. Wauchope, all high authorities and three of them extensive collectors, were consulted, and their opinions, on some points, were widely variant. We have sought to effect a compromise of their views on vexatious questions submitted to them, following generally the majority vote. On the broad principles that guided us they were pretty well agreed.

The works of adopted sons, written during long residence in the State, have been included.

In a few instances the productions of those born in South Carolina who left it permanently in early life and wrote under very different influences and environment have been excluded.

But where the author was a Carolinian by birth, education and tradition and lived in this atmosphere long enough to get the indelible seal of the State upon his heart and character, we claim him and his works as ours, no matter how far afield he may have roamed. "Once a South Carolinian, always a South Carolinian," to borrow the phrase of another.

A few South Carolina imprints, as such, have been entered, either because old and rare, or, in a few instances, because they were presumptive evidence that the authors belonged to us.

In appendices we have put some lists that may prove interesting, such as the portraits and busts, about which there are frequent inquiries, and the bulletins and M. A. theses of the University.

This production, by reason of the varied criteria that will be applied to it, can not please all. It is offered with due humility, in the hope that attention will be called to errors and omissions, and that friends of the University, seeing our deficiencies, may rally to our support and assist in building up in this central institution of learning a collection of "South Caroliniana" that will not only be worthy but that will prove an inexhaustible mine to future investigators seeking full information on any, or all, phases of the history of the State.
